Poly grad is volunteer for Peace Corps

Kristine A. Long, 24, Peace Corps volunteer, introduced home economics single-handedly to the girls attending Tonga High School, Tongatapu, a South Pacific island nation.

Assigned to the Tongan government's education department, Ms. Long is working to strengthen classes with lesson plans, new resources, and suggested teaching methods. She said her purpose is to help teachers by providing them with the information and resources they need.

The school provided the home economics syllabus, an outline listing lessons on food, clothing, home management and child care. It did not contain the content of the individual lessons.

Ms. Long taught 133 students in five grades at Tonga High School. She offered roughly the same course to all beginning students. She started with embroidery, sewing and cooking.

"In Tonga the instruction is very strict—it's a rote memory system. The students do not have text books—the schools cannot afford them," said Ms. Long.

The discussion depends on the teacher. Students know what they Outspoken Barry McArdle addressed amused students in the University Union Plaza yesterday. McArdle claimed to have a legal right to sell property on the moon and was offering it for $1 an acre.

Moon salesman invades campus

by CONNIE PITTS

Astronaut Neil Armstrong's small step for man, but large step for mankind, also might have been a crime: trespassing.

A self-proclaimed moon proprietor, Barry McArdle, dropped in here yesterday to peddle acres of property on the moon, as he's done at fifty other American college and university campuses and in a few other countries, too.

McArdle says he has the right to sell land on the moon, claims the deeds he sells are valid and is suing the government for trespassing and lettering on his property.

The 28-year-old McArdle has been selling moon land at $1 an acre for a period of four years, after graduating from Chico State and securing a copyright in 1971.

"This thing started quite simply as a joke in Sacramento, when I was the first person to lay claim to a heavenly body—the moon. But, actually I'm putting credibility back into real estate," he said.

McArdle, bedecked in a silver cape, shirt, boots and handbag, related his confrontations with the law to a large audience in the University Union Plaza.

"I've been arrested and thrown into jail so many times for trying to sell property on the moon. At the moment I'm being sued for fraud. The government says I cannot sell what I do not own."

"I'm not doing anything illegal. I'm not here to con anyone and if I was, I would be wearing a business suit with a pretty American flag. And I ask you: Do I look solid?" said the moon salesman.

Among some of the reasons McArdle listed for becoming involved in lunar sales were, "the promotion and perpetuation of individuality, to keep lunacy public, to make people laugh and to survive. Times are tough. A guy's got to make it while he can."

According to McArdle, he has never attempted to sell moon property through mail. All his sales are made in person.

"I know it's crazy and insane—but, it's live. If you buy one of these documents for $1, you're really making an investment in insanity."

Alcohol abuse study

Poll results released

by ROGER VINCENT

"I don't do much drinking myself. Three beers and I'm flat out."

So says the co-ordinator of Cal Poly's alcohol abuse program, Mike Looney, who has hired by the administration to determine if there is an alcohol abuse problem here and if so what can be done about it.

Film centers on Mexico's failing

Mexico has not changed politically since the 1910 Revolution—this is the message of an award-winning film to be shown in Chumash Auditorium tonight.

"Mexico: The Frozen Revolution," sponsored by the Ethnic Programming Board, will be shown at 7:30 p.m. at a price of 75 cents for students and $1.25 for the general public.

Written and directed by Raymundo Gleyzer, the 80-minute, color film won top honors at the 1971 Locarno Film Festival and was voted Best Documentary at the Adelaide Film Festival in 1973.

The film portrays Mexico as a society built from the 1910-17 Revolution—but one that has failed to live up to its promise. Using Spanish dialogue, along with English subtitles and narration, the picture documents the development of the revolution and the subsequent Civil War.

With the help of rare contemporary scenes, "Mexico: The Frozen Revolution" outlines the lives together and ideologies of the men who have helped shape modern Mexico.

Mixed in with the historical footage are scenes from the 1970 Presidential campaign of Luis Echeverria, candidate of the Industrial Revolutionary Party (PRI).

As the dominant political party in Mexico, the PRI has never lost an election—sometimes winning by as much as 85 per cent of the vote.

Also included in tonight's program will be an 11-minute film, "Nosotros Venceremos," which Cesar Chavez described as "the poem of our struggle."

"Nosotros Venceremos" (we shall overcome) is in Spanish only. The film shows Chavez' march to Sacramento and the victory of his union's (United Farm Workers of America) label on the grape box.

The two films will be followed by guest speaker Manuel Echeverria. A student at Cal Poly, Echeverria has been affiliated with UFWA from its inception.

Looney and Dr. Leo Pinard of the social science department devised and circulated an alcohol questionnaire to Poly students last year, the results of which have just been compiled. He's cautious however about releasing statistics or trying to draw concrete conclusions from the poll.

"Individual tolerances vary so much that it's impossible to determine at what point alcohol is being abused. We don't want to pick some arbitrary amount like 24 beers a week because some people might like they're plenty short of their quota and can drink more without worrying about it."

"National statistics show 10 per cent of the population in the United States has a dependency on ethyl alcohol. We may have an equal percentage in this group or maybe right now they're still learning the alcoholism pattern," Looney said.

The campus survey showed 18-20-year-olds attended more parties per week where alcohol is being served than any other age group. The program co-ordinator feels this does not necessarily mean that age group drinks more, just that they're likely to do it in a social or "TG" situation where booze is available to the legally underage.

Looney, who has a masters degree in psychology, finds some of the survey's statistics disturbing: like the 81 per cent who indicated they drink to relieve tensions. He also sees WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate formally established an 11-member special committee Monday to investigate alleged CIA intelligence gathering abuses—an inquiry one prospective member said may require testimony from former President Richard M. Nixon.

The vote was 83-4 with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.; William V. Scott, R-Va.; Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga.; and Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. voting no.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chairman Al Ullman recommended Monday that his House Ways and Means Committee consider a quick $5 billion tax rebate for low income Americans, coupled with a reduction of $10 billion or more in withholding rates for low and moderate income taxpayers.

The committee may also consider a tax credit for Social Security withholding taxes for those of low and moderate income. Ullman, D-Ore., called the Social Security tax—now 5.85 per cent of a wage-earner's first $14,000 of income—"very regressive."

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — The Voice of Uganda newspaper Friday published a front-page nude photograph of former Foreign Minister Elisabeth Bagaya and accused her of "selling herself." It was the newest attack on the former Princess Elizabeth of Toro, a onetime international fashion model who served as her country's spokesman at the United Nations.

President Idi Amin fired her last year, alleging she was a paid agent for unnamed foreign powers and accusing her of disgracing Uganda by making love to a foreign diplomat in a washroom at Orly airport in Paris.

ERIE, Pa. (UPI) — A young woman, her three children and her elderly adoptive father were found shot to death Monday in the father's West Side home, victims of the largest mass murder ever in this northwestern Pennsylvania city of 130,000.

The victims were identified as Paul Tolle, in his 70's, a former newspaper columnist and founder of some New York restaurants, his adopted daughter Athena Chisholm, in her 30's, and her children David Lee, 9, Paul, 12, and Anna Marie, 6.

ST. PAUL, MINN. (UPI) — The Minnesota Supreme Court ruled Friday that an insurance company should repay Northwest Airlines the $200,000 it gave a hijacker who parachuted into a western wilderness and hasn't been seen since.

Northwest gave a passenger who identified himself as "D. B. Cooper" $200,000 on Nov. 24, 1971, in one of the first spectacular plane hijackings for money.

dangerous significance in the fact that 51 per cent of the students polled felt that 10 per cent to 20 per cent of Cal Poly students drink to excess while only 3 per cent said they worried about the consequences and only 2 per cent worry about possible dependence.

This is an ominous sign to Looney, because, "Most people seem to think that as long as they're wearing ivy league shirts, passing in school and no where near skid row that they don't have a problem. Actually about only three to five per cent of the nation's alcoholics are on skid row; the rest continue to function in all walks of life."

The program developing on campus to abate alcohol abuse will focus on multi-media education, Looney hopes. "Personally I'd like to change the image of alcohol. It's a light, accepted thing. Drunks are funny, like Dean Martin. Right now most money is being spent on reform not prevention. I'd like to beef up our curriculum to educate students about the possible dangers of alcohol.

"I want our program to be positive, not preachy. The majority of students handle alcohol pretty well."

want to learn and the curriculum should be left up to them," she said.

Ms. Long is now working to standardize the information home economics students receive. She has prepared a teacher's guide explaining the basic equipment, a lesson plan, and suggested methods of teaching home economics.

Ms. Long is working on the course offerings equivalent to grades seven and eight in America. She is assisted by committee of Tongan teachers who help provide information, resources and review her work.

"I am trying to emphasize activities that involve students—anything that gets the student out of their seat, rather than copying things off the blackboard," she said. "The students like home economics because they have freedom and activities in the classroom," she said.

Home economics classes cover traditional Tongan homemaking arts and modern practices. The objective, Ms. Long said, is "to prepare students for change and to keep tradition in Tonga."

Home economics classrooms without refrigerators meant adjustments for Ms. Long. Daily marketing is necessary to buy food for her students to cook. She had to learn New Zealand measurements. She taught in English, but had to speak slowly and carefully so her students could understand her.

Ms. Long, a Cal Poly 1972 home economics graduate plans to return here to work towards a teaching credential.

"I realized that I really like high school age students," she said. "I know the kind of teacher I want to be and how I want to run a class."

SAC looks for housing coordinator

The position of an off-campus housing coordinator may be open by March.

The news came to the Student Affairs Council Wednesday night, Jan. 22, from Sue Stevenson, of the Ad Hoc Housing Coordinator Committee.

The selection committee, chaired by Bob Timone, will meet this week. And a bulletin and job description will go out, hopefully by the end of next week, Stevenson reported.

After the bulletin is sent out, there will be a three week filing period. Then interviews will take place where the field is to be narrowed to five or six prospects. Then a final choice will be made.

The coordinator's salary will start at $10,700, said Stevenson.

Goose story

PACIFICA, Calif. (UPI) — Elmo the goose will not lose his home despite having nipped a mailman.

When the mailman was bitten, the Humane Society was notified and its investigator said Mr. and Mrs. Robert Maguire could not keep 15-pound Elmo in their home.

Then a state Fish and Game Department official ruled the Maguires didn't have to give him up. Next came the City Attorney's office, which said the family faced a fine if it didn't get rid of Elmo.

The controversy touched off a neighborhood drive to keep Elmo. Residents liked the goose and often fed him. In fact, they said, he nipped the postman only because he wanted something to eat and the bite was a playful one.

The issue finally came before an animal advisory board which sided with Elmo and the Maguires. The panel said Elmo could stay—and that this was final.

Letter clarified by ex-firefighter

Editor:

After reading Frank Springer's letter concerning reduction of speed limits to 35 m.p.h., I would like to clarify some topics of his discussion.

Emergency vehicles within the state of California are regulated by California Highway Patrol standards to observe posted speed laws. No emergency vehicle may exceed 55 m.p.h.

Drawing from six years employment with the Fire Service and Reserve Service in the state of California, I will make the following statements:

The average speed of pumpers, ladder trucks or other such heavy apparatus emergency vehicles is now usually 35 m.p.h. This figure was developed for safety purposes, due to weight loads, traffic conditions and gear trains necessary to move such loads.

Rescue vehicles, although lighter in weight and appearing to speed in observation, are limited to the posted speed limit.

In emergency response, especially when life and property are involved, time is a precious element. The maximum time an individual suffering from a cardiopulmonary arrest may be revived, with possibility of brain damage, is six minutes. A housefire usually goes unnoticed for ten minutes when combustion is approaching intense levels. The average response for fire apparatus in the city of San Luis Obispo is seven minutes to any point in the city.

The main point on which I question Mr. Springer's reasoning is the following: If an emergency vehicle could never exceed 35 m.p.h., although safe conditions permitted, how would you feel if you or a relative were: 1) trapped in a burning room, 2) unconscious due to cardiopulmonary arrest or 3) pinned under an automobile? Would 35 m.p.h. or a higher speed limit, such as it now stands, be more beneficial?

Abortion stand questioned

Editor:

Having just read Donald Curtis' letter in your Friday paper, I have decided that it is time people started looking at the good side of abortion laws.

First of all, has anyone ever considered what the life of that child would be like in this over-populated world? Should the child have to live life being constantly punished for its parents' mistake in conceiving it?

What about mothers who have been stricken with rubella during pregnancy? The government should give their child the right to live in a world of dog-eat-dog with ten strikes already against them?

What about the parents? Are they mentally prepared to rear a child? Are they mentally prepared to give the child up for adoption?

I think that the abortion laws are good as they are. As it stands now, abortion is helping to curb our growing population problem and to help two people who made a mistake in a matter of minutes from suffering for the rest of their lives.

It Sounds Incredible

BUT EVELYN WOOD GRADUATES CAN READ

THE EXORCIST IN 58 MINUTES

At That Speed, The 403 Pages Come Across
With More Impact Than The Movie.

You can do it, too. So far over 550,000 other people have done it. People who have different jobs, different IQs, different interests, different educations have completed the course. Our graduates are people from all walks of life. These people have all taken a course developed by Evelyn Wood, a prominent educator. Practically all of them at least tripled their reading speed with equal or better comprehension. Most have increased it even more.

Think for a moment what that means. All of them — even the slowest — now read an average novel in less than two hours. They read an entire issue of Time or Newsweek in 35 minutes. They don't skip or skim. They read every word. They use no machines. Instead, they let the material they're reading determine how fast they read. And mark this well: they actually understand more, remember more, and enjoy more than when they read slowly. That's right! They understand more. They remember more. They enjoy more. You can do the same thing — the place to learn more about it is at a free speed reading lesson.

This is the same course President Kennedy had his Joint Chiefs of Staff take. The staff of President Nixon completed this course in June 1970. The same one Senators and Congressmen have taken.

Come to a Mini-Lesson and find out. It is free to you and you will leave with a better understanding of why it works. One thing that might bother you about your reading speed is that someone might find out how slow it is. The instructors at the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Free Speed Reading Lesson will let you keep your secret. It's true we practice the first step to improved reading at a Mini-Lesson and we will increase your reading speed on the spot, but the results will remain your secret. Plan to attend a free Mini-Lesson and learn that it is possible to read 3-4-5 times faster, with comparable comprehension.

Win one and lose one

Gal cagers see both sides

Basketball is a lot like life. You win some and you lose some. And Coach Mary Stallard's women hoopers saw life as it was last weekend.

The Mustangs beat U. C. Riverside, 45-35, and lost to a tough Cal State Fullerton squad, 90-10.

In Friday's game, the Mustangs took a 24-11 lead over Riverside at halftime and maintained their lead, 45-35, at the final buzzer. Guard Sherry Fertitta, leading scorer for the Mustangs, also was leading scorer for the game with 20 points. Forward Cindy Estrada swept the boards with 23 rebounds and scored eight points. Center Chris Kosik tallied eight points and pulled down 10 rebounds.

Sherry McDonald of Riverside sunk 13 points and grabbed 10 rebounds, while teammate Carol Horimoto added six points.

In the game against Fullerton on Saturday, Poly fell behind 53-9 at the half. The Fullerton crew was completely at ease on its homecourt and rolled past the Mustangs for a 90-18 victory.

Even Fertitta had a hard time against Fullerton, scoring only six points. Estrada managed 10 rebounds, but hit for only one field goal. Kosik pulled down nine carrens and scored four markers.

Nancy Dunkle, called the female Bill Walton by coach Stallard, poured in more points than the whole Mustang crew with 24. Jo Ann Reis tanked 16 points.

In the two junior varsity matches, the Colts, coached by Carol Minetti, also split games.

Poly defeated Riverside, 34-20, and lost to Fullerton, 52-29.

In the Colts' victory over Riverside, Debbie Brown led with 10 points and got seven rebounds. Kris Harrington was right behind with nine tallies and five rebounds. Denni Lopez chipped in with six points and picked off six rebounds.

Evelyn McGowan tanked 10 points for Riverside.

In the Fullerton game, the Colts were behind 23-15 at the half. Fullerton allowed Poly about 15 points a half and increased their lead to a 27 point margin.

Harrington scored 11 points and hit the boards for eight rebounds for the Mustangs, while teammate Diana Bukaty chipped in with six points and five rebounds.

For Fullerton, Marty Cooksey hooped 14 points.

Coach Stallard was not overjoyed with the Fullerton game score, although she attributed the large lead to Fullerton's skill and commended her team for its efforts and attitude.

Speakers for railway label strike illegal

By UPI

Surprise strikes by thousands of shopcraft workers hit the sprawling Burlington Northern Railroad and two smaller lines Monday, temporarily stranding thousands of Chicago commuters. Court orders sent strikers back to their posts within hours on two of the railroads.

Members of four unions pulled down picket lines at dozens of points along the 10-state Burlington Northern System after U.S. District Court judges in Chicago and St. Paul, Minn., issued temporary restraining orders. The threat of court action sent some 2,000 Louisville and Nashville Railroad workers back to their jobs.

Hundreds of electricians, boilermakers, carmen and laborers picketed at Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad installations in Michigan, Ohio and Virginia. Management personnel helped keep Chesapeake trains rolling but a company spokesman said a continued strike could halt the line's trains in Michigan.

Leftist moves threaten war in Portugal

LISBON (UPI) — Foreign Minister Mario Soares said Monday recent provocative moves by the Communist Party have opened the possibility of civil war and foreign intervention in Portugal.

"There exists a profound division in Portuguese society and in these times we cannot discount the possibility of civil war with an economic blockade and foreign intervention," he told a news conference.

Soares warning came after a weekend of violence in the northern city of Porto where Communist demonstrators laid siege to the national convention of the Social Democratic Center party.

The Communists call the CDS a Fascist party and accused it of links with the regime of premier Marcello Caetano, overthrown by the military coup last April.

Foreign delegates at the CDS convention in Porto said authorities did not act until the demonstration got out of hand. Hospital spokesmen said 17 persons were injured in the fray, including five policemen hit by gunfire.
